

Arizona Wind

Words and Music ©2006 Christopher M Solaas

Intro:

Versel:

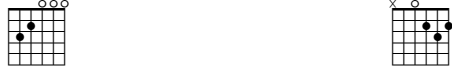

Sitting here this morning waiting for the light to change

This "Rush Hour" traffic about to drive me insane

The light is green but no one's going, so I have no choice

But to sit and try to listen to Your voice.

Chorus:

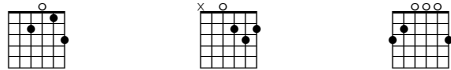

Oh, this city life is drowning out the sound of Your call

Through the cares of this world it's hard to hear it at all,

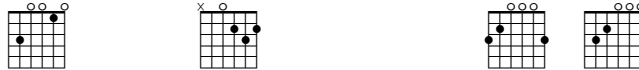

I'm so tired of this day to day pursuit of passing things

And the empty satisfaction that they bring.

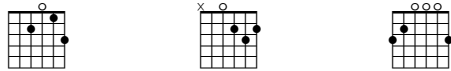

Thinking back I try to recall when I last heard you speak,

Was it looking through the windshield at a Rocky Mountain Peak

Or Your laughter in the babble of a brook around the bend

Or Your whisper in the Arizona wind?

Verse2:

I remember when I first met You, it was at a church camp
Sitting round a campfire while my clothes were all damp.
And it felt just like a prison 'til the hour You set me free
When I heard about the price You paid for me!

Chorus:

Verse3:

Well, now the traffic's moving, so I'll have to say "So long."
And I hope You heard the longing here in my simple song,
I'll be packing up tonight, and when I speak with You again,
I'll get my handful of that Arizona Wind!

Chorus: